Consider how Luther, Alice, DS Ripley and Zoe are each introduced to the narrative.

How does the framing of each character help to construct their role within the narrative for the audience?

How is the framing and shot composition different when each character interacts with another and what does this suggest in terms of power?